FIELDS WILL BE SEEN IN GERMAN COMEDY TONIGHT

"Bargain Hunters" and "Battle of Vanilla" Make Up Double Bill at Bijou

During the 12 weeks that the Raymond Teal Musical Comedy Company has played in Honolulu, Fritz Fields, the clever comedian and producer of the aggregation, has essayed more than 20 different and distinct roles. The patrons of the Bijou theater tonight will be given an opportunity of witnessing Fields in an entirely different character from any that he has ever portrayed here—titled a German comedian.

As "Louie Shultz," a wealthy and eccentric German, Fields plays an important part in "The Bargain Hunters," an up-to-date travesty on the modern department store. This show is one of two separate and distinct musical comedies which will be put on at the Bijou theater tonight. Both of these playlets are said to be the biggest laugh producers in the Raymond Teal repertoire.

The second offering for the evening's entertainment will be "The Battle of Vanilla."

"This show is a scream," says the management, "being nothing more or less than a hodgepodge of riotous fun, clean comedy and an attractive bunch of pretty and tuneful song hits. The Irish, Hebrew and Swiss navies come in for a lot of good natured bantering and as an admiral of the Hebrew navy Roy Kinslow is immense.

During the course of the big double bill show tonight Madeline Rowe will sing "A Little Bit of Green;" Homer Long will render a new mainland song hit, "In Time of War Prepare for Peace;" Pansy De Lacour will sing "Let's Go Where We Can Have Some Fun," and Roy Kinslow is down on the bill for "Wrap it Up and Take it Home."

'KINDLING' AT LIBERTY PROVES BIG CROOK PLAY

Charlotte Walker, the "Margaret Illington of the screen" is making her local debut at the Liberty in the great Illington masterpiece, "Kindling." It will be difficult for anyone who has seen Miss Illington's portrayal of Maggie Schultz, Charles Kenyon's greatest stage character, to believe that she has a peer, but it is a fact. Charlotte Walker, in the film version of "Kindling," earns the right to comparison with one of America's leading dramatic artists.

Probably the facts that "Kindling" is a "crook play," that it was Margaret Illington's first successful vehicle after her return to the stage from honeymooning are to some extent due to its sustained popularity. However, the chief reason is the fact that it is Charles Kenyon's greatest dramatic work—and he has written a number of good ones—and that in Maggie Schultz he has brought to the stage and screen a type that is far from uncommon in the great tenement districts of any large city, but that is entirely unknown to the well-to-do classes. Kenyon paints the more unfortunate brothers and sisters of humanity; he paints them with all their virtues and with all their faults. They are real folks taken from life for the edification and education of those on "the other side." Kenyon had an object in view when he wrote "Kindling," and that object is most apparent to all who see the picture.

Elaine Dodge, in "The Romance of Elaine," delves just a little deeper into the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Craig Kenedy, her lover and the scientific detective. "Neal of the Navy," one of the latest serial releases, will shortly follow the Elaine series on the Liberty program.
